THEMES

CONCEPT

The forests of British Columbia are majestic and dense with the tallest trees in Canada. As trees age and fall, the surface of the forest is affected and new habitat for shelter is created. The trunks decompose and provide nutrients for new growth.

This concept is centred around a large focal deck where families can sit and watch the space under the shade of trees. The play space starts in the toddler area with a burrow, rock cave that provides shelter, as well as a slide, sand play and swings. The central area includes swings, and towers with rope bridges that make it feel like climbing through the treetops. East of the tower is an area with 'fallen' trees for climbing around, and at the far east, a zip line.
